

Continual Improvement Community MEMBERSHIP

High performing organizations are great at learning -- from success and failure, between their members, and from inside and outside their own organization.

Benefits: Achieve more together!

- See problems differently; more diversity of thoughts and ideas
- Solve problems faster
- Learn from others in and out of my industry
- You are never alone and never lacking ideas or solutions
- Templates and job aids that help achieve a method or task efficiently
- Maximize experience and expertise
- Challenge existing paradigms and long standing "this is the way we've always done it"
- Environment where collaboration and sharing leads to innovative and transformational change
- An opportunity to help others

One powerful learning strategy is active participation in a continual improvement community where people with a passion for improvement can join others and add diversity of experience to their improvement efforts.

A community of practice with --

- A common focus of interest in continual improvement and creating high performance
- Collaborative relationships that encourage sharing with their peers
- The getting and giving of practical information, experiences, and resources that enables performance and helps each community member to develop personally and create benefits for their organization.

We have decades of experience in building communities of practice both within and across organizations so that members have access to resources, a forum to share, a place to get advice, and an environment to energize their pursuit of high performance.
